Beermann speaks of Nebraska newspapers

by Tory Duncan
Managing Editor, Sutton Clay County News

As newspapers across the country celebrate National Newspaper Week this week, one leader in the print media world that has a clear cut passion for newspapers, and more directly, community newspapers is Allen Beermann, the executive director of the Nebraska Press Association (NPA) and the Nebraska Press Advertising Service (NPAS).

Allen J. Beermann
Executive Director,
NPA/NPAS

Beermann, who is also well known for his service to the State of Nebraska as Secretary of State for 24 years, stepped into the role of executive director for NPA/NPAS after leaving state government in 1995.

When asked what the state of the newspaper business is in, he quickly premised the question, sharing, "There is a big difference in newspapers. Large national metro papers and then we have community newspapers, like so many of our papers in Nebraska are."

Beermann noted, "Many large metro papers, like in Chicago, Denver, St. Louis and many more are struggling for a couple of big reasons. They are too big to run community news, they don't have enough staff and are battling many sources of social media, smart phones and television."

He quickly turned his focus on community newspapers, sharing a much brighter outlook for small-town papers.

"It truly is local community newspapers that keeps print media strong."

Beermann added, "The internet doesn't have people at meetings or events. Bloggers and others posting on social media sites do have an impact on our small-community newspapers, but those bloggers and people posting things online aren't trained writers, they, at times, cloud up information because they don't know how to glean unbiased information to post information."

Beermann notes that trained writers and editors can go to a city council meeting and share the information that readers should know.

"They don't go into meetings with agendas they go in as an unbiased source of information, whose job is to report the news in the form of a story."

Newseum is an interactive museum that promotes the First Amendment and free expression. Nearly 800 newspapers transmit their front pages electronically to the Newseum every day. Eighty of them are enlarged and printed for display in "Today's Front Pages Gallery," feature — among them one from every state and the District of Columbia — as well as a sampling of international newspapers.

New for 2019: Two NPA Better Newspaper Contests - one for print, one for digital Attached with this week's Bulletin is the Call for Entries (PDFs) for the 2019 NPA Better Newspaper Contest, which includes contest guidelines and instructions. There will be two separate contests starting in 2019 - one for print and one for digital.

Call for Entries are being sent out earlier this year: 1) to give you more time to sort through issues and find your best work, and 2) because the 2019 Annual NPA Convention (and BNC Awards Banquet) will convene two weeks earlier than usual - on April 5 - 6, 2019 in Kearney at the Holiday Inn.

Start submitting online entries now to re-familiarize yourself with how the online process works.

Entry deadlines for both print and digital contests is January 10, 2019. Questions? Contact Carolyn Bowman in the NPA office, cb@nebpress.com.

Before coming to Nebraska, she was a reporter with Cronkite News, where she served as part of the Borderlands bureau, covering minorities and multicultural topics and issues, as well as underserved communities in Phoenix.

Directly after graduating, Marquez accepted an internship with the Institute for Journalism and Natural Resources, where she focused on assisting the Lower Colorado River Institute, an initiative revolving around the lower Colorado River and issues with natural resources in that region.

BOOTS ON THE GROUND

Beermann used the “boots on the ground” scenario to share his thoughts about the overall health of Nebraska community newspapers, and newspapers in general.

“Community newspapers certainly have people with boots on the ground. They are involved in churches, school events, community events and otherwise. People in this business aren’t going to be successful sitting behind a desk waiting for information to come to them.”

He added, “Going back to the social media impact, what people don’t understand, it’s hard for newspapers to know everything that’s going on and sometimes they don’t have enough staff to cover everything going on. But the art of picking up a phone and calling your local newspaper office to inform them is the biggest hurdle many papers have.”

The lack of communication from readers, and even non-readers of a paper has become an issue.

“In many aspects people are detached that calling the paper is an after thought. The unfortunate thing is that people think social media outlets will get the information out to people and think that surely the newspaper will see a post about an event.”

THE RECORDERS OF HISTORY

Beermann is a huge advocate of the historical chronicling that a newspaper provides, sharing that newspapers are key in recording what becomes historical records.

“It could be in the form of a public notice, an obituary, stories of tragedy and stories of good. Newspapers record that history.”

Beermann noted that newspapers have a tough job in recording that history, because the community newspaper has to be attentive to feelings and how a tragic moment in life can affect a family. They can see things that many people rarely see.

“When covering a fire or an accident, when you are in a small newspaper, those reporters many times know who is involved, and it’s a tough situation to be in, while doing their jobs.”

He noted that as trends change in the newspaper business, the battles that newspapers had to deal with 20 years ago are far different than the issues newspapers face today.

“It’s really about the lack of communication with a newspaper that is the toughest challenge. As I hear from publishers and editors and certainly reporters from across our state, its toughest challenge is people assuming that newspapers have someone glued to social media at all times and pick up events that way, instead of making a call or sending an email to a newspaper, letting them know about an event.”

Beermann believes strongly in the newspapers he works with in NPA. The core of Beermann has print media ingrained in his heart.

“We (newspapers) have to treat people with respect, and we have some well respected people in our newspapers in Nebraska.”

Beermann shared that in his mind it has become so hard today to have a civil conversation with others, especially when it comes to politics and religion, and he lives by an old Chinese Proverb, “He or she who is throwing mud is losing ground.”

Getting involved with newspapers, engaging with them is so important to Beermann. He strongly believes that there is no such thing as “fake news.”

“Those that feel there is fake news in community news, many times take issue with something that has been reported and disagree with a fact or a comment.”

ABOUT BEERMANN: He served as Legal Counsel and Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of State for two years, and on Sept. 7, 1967, was appointed Deputy Secretary of State. On Jan. 7, 1971, being sworn into office as Secretary of State for his first four year term at age 31. On Jan. 9, 1991, Beermann was sworn into office for a sixth four year term. On Jan. 6, 1995, he became the Executive Director of the Nebraska Press Association/Nebraska Press Advertising Service, where he continues to serve as the association’s Executive Director.

Reynolds Journalism Institute seeks newsroom partners for millennial-driven innovative projects

Jennifer Nelson, Sr. Information Specialist, Donald W. Reynolds Journalism Institute

With shrinking newsrooms and tight budgets, it can be a challenge to come up with fresh ideas or enough hands to work on all the innovative projects your newsroom thinks up.

To help, the Donald W. Reynolds Journalism Institute is looking for media outlets interested in partnering with advanced students from the Missouri School of Journalism as part of its RJI Student Innovation Fellowship program.

Fellows are embedded in a newsroom for a full semester to help with projects employing innovative technologies, storytelling techniques and revenue models.

MANAGING EDITOR - The Lexington Clipper-Herald is seeking a full-time managing editor to join our team. Candidate will be responsible for supervising and directing the gathering of news and editorial content; production of the newspaper; responsible for all of the news department and its employees; long-range planning of future coverage and responsible for setting and communicating coverage imperatives to the news staff. Ideal candidate will have a bachelor's degree in a related area and a minimum five years of supervisory experience, or an equivalent combination of education and experience, and a high level of attention to detail. Apply online at <https://usr54.dayforcehcm.com/CandidatePortal/en-US/bhmedia>, or send letter and resume to Attn: Heather, PO Box 599, Lexington, NE.

LINE PRINTER FOR SALE - The Norfolk Daily News has a Printronix P7210 line printer for sale. It is about 7 years old and gently used. Nothing wrong with it, we just got new software and don't use anymore. We have 27 boxes of 14 7/8 x 11 white page to go with it. Please call Cristina at 402-371-1080.

NEWSPAPER FOR SALE - The St. Edward Advance, a weekly newspaper in St. Edward, NE, is for sale. Contact Stephanie Dawson at 402-678-2771.

NEWSPAPER FOR SALE - Don't miss out on this unique opportunity to own a well-established, historic, county seat weekly newspaper. This 139-year-old, turn-key operation comes with all distribution and printing in place and is the sole publication in the county it serves. The paper has an excellent following of local readers and is well-supported by local advertisers, with room for exponential growth in advertising, subscriptions and commercial printing. Living quarters are located on site with building and equipment included with sale. Stanton, a town rich in history, is only ten minutes away from the city of Norfolk – a community fast-growing in industry – drawing many families to build new homes and live in the smaller town of Stanton. Excellent opportunity! Call Brian Hadcock at 402-640-7723, or email registersports@stanton.net.

ORDER SAFETY VESTS THROUGH NNA

U.S. Dept. of Transportation regulation requires media representatives who work within the rights-of-way of federal-aid highways to wear a specific type of high-visibility safety vest. This applies to all newspaper employees - not just reporters & photographers.

NNA offers ANSI Class II-2004-107 safety vests with reflective markings and Velcro closure. In large letters on the back is the word PRESS. Sizes S-XL, $19.50 ea.; sizes 2XL-4XL, $21.50 ea. (plus S/H). To order, call NNA at 217-241-1400.

Advertising in the Classified Advertising Exchange is no charge for NPA members and $10 per week for non-members (approximately 25 words). It's a great way to sell or find equipment, hire a new employee, advertise a service which you provide, sell or buy a newspaper. Only Nebraska member newspapers may advertise for help wanted for Nebraska newspapers. No out-of-state help wanted advertisements accepted. Just mail, email or fax us your ad copy by noon Friday for the following weeks' Bulletin. For questions or additional information, contact the NPA office: (402)476-2851, NE: 800-369-2850, FAX: (402)476-2942 or email: nebpress@nebpress.com.
