Our Veterans...who are they?

They are a small percentage of the population that have done a big job; today less than $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1% of the population have served the nation in the military.

But as they return to civilian life they are an immense reservoir of community leaders who have been strengthened by their experiences. They are unequivocally resilient people who sought "purpose" in their lives and took action.

So...Veterans are everyday people... you know them as family, neighbors, friends, and co-workers. They come from all walks of life, with a sense of honor, duty, and conviction; they were and are proud to wear the uniforms of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines and Coast Guard.

We celebrate all of them on Monday, November 11.

Q: A funeral home wants to use an image of the Purple Heart in an ad focusing on veterans. Is that allowed?

A: No, not unless the funeral home has obtained prior written permission from the Department of Defense, the relevant branch of Military Service, or The Institute of Heraldry, which hold the trademark for official seals and other protected logos, insignia and marks of the Department of Defense (DoD) and Military Services.

As a general matter, the DoD and Military Service marks are protected by law from unauthorized use. The Trademark Act, as well as other laws and regulations, give the DoD and Military Service authorization to protect and license their names, insignia, seals, symbols, phrases, and similar identifiers.

If a DoD or Military Service trademark is used without permission, the DoD or Military Service may take appropriate action to enforce their intellectual property rights. cont. pg. 4

Newspaper scam reported in Gage County

Hickman Voice News, Oct. 31, 2019

A resident of rural western Gage County spoke with Southeast Communications dispatcher and a Gage County Sheriff's Office investigator about a possible scam phone call she had received soliciting a newspaper subscription.

She stated that a male caller advised her she could get the Beatrice Daily Sun for $3.57 a week, if she paid online with her credit card. He then stated for only a little bit more, she could get the Sunday edition of the Beatrice Daily Sun delivered to her home. After she told him the Beatrice Daily Sun did not have a Sunday edition, he hung up.

The investigator spoke with the publisher of the Beatrice Daily Sun, and although the newspaper did have a marketing company that made phone calls, the calls were made the previous weekend and for the upcoming weekend, but were not currently being actively solicited.

The Gage County Sheriff's Office urges residents to use caution when providing personal, financial, or confidential information to unknown persons, via phone calls, mail, online, or in person.

As suggested by the Beatrice Daily Sun publisher, never hesitate to call the newspaper or other local business, or stop in to verify the situation.

Mueller and Robak selected for inclusion in 2020 edition of "The Best Lawyers in America©"

William J. Mueller and Kim M. Robak of Mueller Robak LLC have been selected for inclusion in the 2020 edition of "The Best Lawyers in America©" in the field of Government Relations Law.

Mueller and Robak have been named "Best Lawyers" in each of the past 12 years. The guide, which is created from over 7 million peer evaluations, is comprised of the nation's top attorneys in key practice areas.

Mueller and Robak are both graduates of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the University of Nebraska College of Law and are admitted to practice law in the State of Nebraska.

Mueller Robak LLC is located in Lincoln and is the premier lobbying and government relations firms in Nebraska. The professionals of Mueller Robak LLC have an active and respected presence before the Nebraska State Legislature and all agencies of state and local government. They also serve as the lobbying firm for the Nebraska Press Association.

Ed Henninger: 25 newspaper on-thejob ideals

After more than 30 years as the Director of Henninger

Consulting, the time has come for me to shift my attention to Julia, family, grandkids and guitar. I'm not the "retiring type," but I will become so at the end of this year. I'm looking forward to that. For the past few months, I've reprised some of my best columns from years past.

This one focuses on how we think about our work...and ourselves. For the past half-century, I've been a consultant, and editor and a writer. During those 50 years, I've learned a few things about how to do my work well and how to conduct myself in the workplace.

I recently received a call from someone close to me who was struggling in her work. She asked my advice and I did my best to help her. After our conversation, I sent her the following. I call it "25 on-the-job ideals."

Here's the list:

- 1. Be yourself. Everyone else is taken.
- 2. Be a leader.
- 3. Serve the company.
- 4. Bring solutions (not problems) to the table.
- 5. Be the "go to" person.
- 6. Always say "yes." You can backpedal later.
- 7. Promise low, deliver high.
- 8. Share your time freely...when you can.
- 9. Demand respect.
- 10. Face opposition firmly...but gracefully.
- 11. Be professional in everything you do.
- 12. Control the things you can control. Let go of the things you can't.
- 13. Be responsible.
- 14. Be accountable.
- 15. Take the high road.
- 16. Admit your mistakes...and learn from them.
- 17. Never claim credit for yourself. Those who matter will know.
- 18. Lower your expectations of others. Foolish and lazy people aren't worth the space you give them (rent free!) in your head.
- 19. With rare exceptions, you'll never be able to change what someone thinks about you. It's usually not worth the effort.
- 20. Get a mentor—someone you can talk to.
- 21. Be a mentor—someone needs your help.
- 22. Leave 'em laughing.
- 23. Leave 'em wanting more of you.
- 24. Never think of it as "just a job." It's more than that to the people who matter.
- 25. Remember: it's "just a job." Never let your work define who you are as a person.

I've tried to live by these ideals during my entire career. There's been an occasional slip here and there, but following these principles sure has made my professional life easier, more productive — and more fun.

The stock market for ad ideas

By John Foust, Raleigh, NC

Daniel told me about an ad he created for a commercial real estate firm. "They prided themselves on the hard work they did for their customers. Their marketing manager said 'shoe leather' was their secret of success. When I heard that, I knew it would work in their ads.

"I found a stock photo of a shoe with a hole in the sole, then asked our creative department to enlarge the hole to make it more dramatic. The copy described the advertiser's willingness to wear out their shoes to serve their customers. That photo was a real winner. It became the theme for everything they advertised."

Stock photography can be an important addition to your creative toolbox. Here are some points to keep in mind:

1. Look for an image to illustrate an idea you already have. That is what Daniel did. "I knew I needed a picture of a shoe," he said. "It was just a matter of finding the right one. A photo worked better than a drawing, because it was a picture of an actual shoe. Sure, we modified it, but the end product was still a real shoe."

2. Browse through images to find a new idea. Sometimes you'll have a general concept in mind. You just need a visual image to crystallize the idea.

Let's say you're developing a campaign for an investment company that has a long history of helping people navigate the ups and downs of the economy. Their philosophy is, "There's no need to worry. Your investments are safe with us."

You look through some stock images and find several distinct categories to consider – people, objects, activities and places. They all offer opportunities to use comparisons and hyperbole. cont. pg. 4

To consider a few generic examples...could a mountain climber represent the company's expertise in moving onward, regardless of the unpredictable twists and turns of the economy? Could a lighthouse symbolize the firm's guiding principles in protecting their clients' retirement accounts? Could a padlock represent their commitment to financial safety?

What about the advertising for a home builder? Could a paint brush symbolize their meticulous attention to detail in the homes they build? Could a clock represent the fact that their houses sell quickly, because they are so popular?

3. Don't hesitate to modify an image. Like Daniel modified the stock photo of the shoe, you can customize an image to fit your specific situation. "The change made the selling point more noticeable," he said. "I knew the shoe would appear in small ads, as well as large ads – and I didn't want anyone to miss the point."

4. Be sure to check the usage agreement. Even if your publishing company has purchased a collection of stock images, do some research before you present an idea to your client. You'll want to make sure you have the proper permission to use the image how you want – and as many times as you want.

Without a doubt, the "stock market" for photographs is a great place to find ideas.

"We don't go into journalism to be popular. It is our job to seek the truth and put constant pressure on our leaders until we get answers."

- Helen Thomas

The Purple Heart is a service medal, and DoD policy heavily restricts the use of its image. According to the DoD guidance on this issue,

"The reproduction or display of decorations that are awarded to Service members that recognize their valor, heroism, contributions, and achievements is not permitted on social media websites, for commerce or other purposes without prior written authorization from the relevant Military Service or The Institute of Heraldry. An image of the Medal of Honor or Purple Heart is permitted only in rare cases such as for U.S. Post Office stamps, States Department of Motor Vehicle License Plates (where an applicant must show his or her DD214 as proof of award), the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, and the Military Order of the Purple Heart."

Further, the use of Military Service marks is prohibited for all advertising, fundraising and membership drive activities, and Military Service marks are not permissible as part of a non-federal entity's online presence.
